Can we say “Negotiated stipulated order with S.H. Bell in Chicago, IL (after the company failed to respond to an Information Request) that requires installation of ambient monitors that report data to EPA, which we when then post on a site-specific public website.”?

I've made a couple edits that reduced a couple lines.

Importance: High

Hi, all. I've entered all your revisions in response to comments from Ed and we were still over the one-page limit, so I did some editing and got it down to one page. However, we still need to move items to the table at the bottom--not everything can be a "Key Event"—and that will take up more space, so I've suggested even more deletions in blue/strikeout.

I'm going to start moving things into the table now to see how much space we'll lose. In the meantime, could you please review my edits so far in the attached document and let me know if I changed the meaning or took out something that was important to keep? Also, are you OK with deleting what's in blue? Are there any other bullets that you're willing to delete, if we have to take something out? Sara, is it possible to get your three-line bullets down to two lines somehow?

Thanks for any feedback and suggested edits that you can provide.
